Prison guard hostage trial: An in-mate charged with taking an Arizona prison guard hostage for 15 days plans lefend himself in his trial beginning Monand says he will have the woman he is accused of raping "in shreds" when he questions her on the stand.

Jury selection begins this week for Ricky Wassenaar's trial in the longest U.S. prison hostage situation in decades. Acting as his own attorney will allow Wassenaar, 41, to directly question the woman he allegedly took hostage and raped.

Wassenaar and another inmate, Steven Coy, are accused of taking two guards hos tage at the Arizona State Prison Com-plex-Lewis in Buckeye on Jan. 18, 2004. They released one of the guards after a week but held the female guard until prison officials resolved the standoff by agreeing to transfer the inmates to prisons in other Boeing CEO fired: The wife of ousted Boeing CEO Harry Stonecipher has filed for divorce, less than a week after the aerospace company's board forced him out for improper conduct related to an affair with a female executive.

Joan Stonecipher, 68, cited "irreconcil-able differences" in papers filed Friday in Cook County, Ill., Circuit Court. The filing comes just a month after the couple celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary. She listed her occupation as housewife and demanded a "fair and reasonable sum" from her husband, who she described as having "substantial income and wealth.

French journalist: French authorities have received increasing contacts and information about a French journalist taken hos-tage in Iraq, Prime Minister Jean-Pierre Raffarin said Sunday.

Raffarin said the stepped-up communica-tions offered cautious hope that Liberation newspaper reporter Florence Aubenas and Hussein Hanoun al-Saadi, her Iraqi interpreter, could be freed.

Turkish detainee: The U.S. lawyer for a Turkish man who has been held at the Guan-tanamo Bay detention camp in Cuba said Sunday that Turkish officials have told his client's family he would be freed.

Attorney Baher Azmy said that Turkish military officials called the mother of Murat Kurnaz on Saturday and informed her that her son was being flown to a U.S. military base in Turkey.

The news comes days after Azmy told reporters in Germany, where Kurnaz was born, that his client said he had been abused while in Guantanamo

GI gunned down in Mosul attack; Kurds, Shiites near completion on power-sharing deal

BY TODD PITMAN

The Associated Press

BAGHDAD — Two American security contractors were killed and a third wounded by a roadside bomb south of the Iraqicapital on Sunday while Kurdish leadiness said they were nearing completion on a deal with the dominant Shife-led allicance on forming a coalition government at this week's National Assembly.

The three contractors were working for Blackwater Security, a North Carolina-based contracting firm that provides security for U.S. State Department officials in Iraq. They were attacked Saturday on the main road to Hillah, south of Baghdad, U.S. Embassy spokesman Bob Callahan said.

A U.S. soldier also was gunned down late Saturday in a small arms fire attack in the northern Iraqi city of Mosul, the U.S. command said Sunday.

Foreign contractors, too, are often targeted by anti-U.S. guerrillas. At least 23 American civilian security and reconstruction contractors were killed in Iraq up to the end of 2004, according to the Washington-based Brookings Institution.

The State Department said it was "deeply saddened" by the deaths of the two contractors and the wounding of another.

"These men were assigned to the U.S. Embassy in Iraq to protect American diplomats. They played a vital role in our mission to bring democracy, and opportunity to the people of Iraq," State Department spokesman Richard Boucher said in a statement.

Iraqi tribal leaders attend a conference on regional federalism Sunday in Baghdad. In political developments, the country's main Shiite and Kurdish coalitions were putting the finishing touches on an agreement they hope to sign on Monday forming a coalition government, in advance of the National Assembly convening on Wednesday.

The Blackwater employees were in the last vehicle in a four-vehicle corroy and were traveling to Hillah from Baghdad, Callahan said. A foreign security official said they were in a black Chevrolet Suburban. The road south traverses an area known as the "Triangle of Death" because of the frequency of insurgent attacks.

Blackwater said the contractors, who were not identified, were attacked on a highway just southeast of Baghdad's airport. The company said the wounded employee's injuries were not life-threatening.

In March 2004, four Blackwater employees were killed in the turbulent city of Fallujah, and two of the corpses were hung from a bridge, triggering a bloody three-week siege of the restive Sunni Muslim city west of Baehdad soon afterward.

Two Iraqis also were killed and five wounded Sunday when a roadside bomb missed a U.S. convoy in al-Obeidi in southeastern Baghdad, said Dr. Ali Karim of Kindi hospital, where the casualties were brought.

In the north, Kurdish leaders said they would go ahead with a deal they made with the Shiite-dominated United Iraqi Alliance last week to help form a coalition government when the 275-member National Assembly convenes on Wednesday.

The Kurds won 75 seats in the Assembly during Jan. 30 elections.

The alliance won 140 seats and needs Kurdish support to assemble the two-thirds majority to elect a president, who will then give a mandate to the prime "Talks between us did not fail. Both delegations went back to review the negotiations," said Fuad Masoum, a member of the Patriotic Union of Kurdistan.

Interim Deputy Prime Minister Barham Saleh, a Kurd, said the two sides were very close to reaching a comprehensive agreement, including the makeup of the coalimeter, including the makeup of the coalimeter of the provent and denied reports that their power-sharing deal had collapsed.

"The Kurdish side will fully cooperate to reach a comprehensive agreement that will guarantee a national unity government for Iraq up to handling the upcoming challenges." Saleh said.

"There are some details that have to be determined soon and there are some loose ends regarding some details but at the same time, there are many principles that were agreed upon," he added.

Interim Foreign Minister Hoshyar Zebari, a Kurd, said a Kurdish delegation was to meet with the alliance.

"We are going to Baghdad to continue discussion, we are very close to a final agreement. The meeting of the assembly on the 16th will take place as planned and there's no changes," he said.

Reports: U.S. informed about rescue at last minute

The Associated Press

ROME — American officials in Iraq were told that an Italian intelligence officer was there to free a hostage — but only at the very last minute, shortly before U.S. troops opened fire on their vehicle, killing the officer and wounding the woman, Italian media reported Sunday.

Several Italian dailies cited a neport now in the hands of Rome prosecutors by Maj. Gen. Mariol Marioli, an Italian who is the coalition forces' second-in-command. In it, Marioli said U.S. authorities were aware that the agent, Nicola Calipari, and another officer were in Iraq, but only he knew why. He said Calipari had told him not to tell the Americans they were there to collect a hostage.

Italian media have speculated that the reason for not telling the Americans was due to U.S. opposition to Italy's policy of negotiating with kidnappers.

However, Marioli also said that he finally told an American officer with him at the Baghdad airport — a certain "Capt. Green" after getting a call that the mission had been a success and that the two agents and freed journalist Gitlliana Sgrena were on their way back, according to dailies Corriere della Sera, Il Messaggero and La Stampa.

WASHINGTON — Families of a New York Army National Guard unit are defending its actions in the checkpoint shooting of an Italian journalist and intelligence officer, with one nervous father saying his son told him "anybody in that unit would have done the same thing."
"Nobody takes any chances," said William Bam-

"Nobody takes any chances," said William Bambino of Wantagh, N.Y., who spoke to his son, Pfc. Phillip Bambino, two days after the March 4 checkpoint shooting, though his son wasn't involved. "If somebody doesn't heed a warning, they don't give them a second chance. A second chance is too

Pfc. Bambino is part of Manhattan's 69th Infantry Regiment of the 42nd Infantry Division, which was on duty when a car carrying a freed Italian journalist and her rescuer came upon a U.S. military checkpoint on Baghdad's notorious airport road.

Just two days before the shooting, the 69th had lost two soldiers from Queens in a roadside bomb attack. They are among more than a dozen members of the First Battalion, 69th Regiment that have died in combat since arriving in October.

"They're all on edge," William Bambino said of his son, 23, and his fellow soldiers. Anti-U.S. attacks are "an everyday occurrence."

Some families worry it will be harder for soldiers to do their jobs for fear of being second-guessed. Already, human rights groups have stepped up criticism that U.S. checkpoint guards are too quick to shoot amid this and other recent friendly-fire slavings.

> Prime Minister Silvio Berlusconi said the car was traveling slowly at night and stopped immediately when a light was flashed at a checkpoint, before U.S. troops fired on the car.

Sgrena has said that no light was flashed at the vehicle and that no warning shots were fired.

The U.S.-led coalition in Iraq has ordered an investigation into the shooting, with Italian officials' participation.

U.S. deaths in Iraq

The Associated Press

As of Saturday, at least 1,513 members of the U.S. military have died since the beginning of the Iraq war in March 2003, according to an Associated Press count. At least 1,153 died as a result of hostile action, according to the Defense Department. The figures include four military civilians.

The AP count is five higher than the Defense Department's tally, last updated at 10 a.m. EST Friday.

The British military has reported 86 deaths; Italy, 20; Ukraine, 18; Poland, 17; Spain, 11; Bulgaria, eight; Slovakia, three; Estonia, Thailand and the Netherlands, two each; and Denmark, El Salvador, Hungary, Kazakhstan and Latvia one death each.

Since May 1, 2003, when President Bush declared that major combat operations in Iraq had ended, 1,375 U.S. military members have died, according to APs count. That includes at least 1,044 deaths resulting from hostile action, according to the military's num-

Afghan baby is a special delivery

U.S. soldiers help mother give birth on Black Hawk en route to base

Stars and Strings

BAGRAM AIR BASE, Afghanistan - The population of Afghanistan grew slightly Satur-day, thanks in part to a pair of Black Hawk crews and a 25-year-old flight medic from Wiesbaden, Germany.

Army Spc. Kyle Storbakken helped an Afghan mother deliver a healthy 6½-pound baby while aboard the Black Hawk flying to the U.S. military base Salerno.

"This was my first delivery," Storbakken said via a phone interview from Salerno, a remote base a few hours away by helicopter from Bagram

It was the first such delivery that anyone associated with the current med country had knowledge of. Col. John Giddens, the commander of the 249th General Hospital at Bagram, said most Afghans the hospital sees are those critically injured by mines, acci-dents or attacks by anti-coalition forces.

"It's very nice to have a joyful emergency coming through our doors," he said.

Peer Mullah Khan, the baby's father, is a leader of the village next to the U.S. outpost at Skhin. Through a translator, he said he came to U.S. troops for help when his wife started struggling during labor.

Giving birth isn't a new experience for his wife, Melawa. The baby girl, who hasn't been named yet, is the couple's 14th child. Two have died, but the others - ranging from the newest addition to a 19-year old girl - make for a large family. Two sons currently serve in the Afghan army.

American officials said they agreed to take the mother and father aboard the aircraft because it appeared that the placenta was be tween the baby and the birth canal, potentially putting both lives at risk. Fortunately, that turned out to not be the case

In order to save time, one helicopter was disnatched from Salerno to Skhin to nick up the mother while another left Bagram to fly to Salerno. While the first helicopter was on its way back from the village to Salerno, the mother gave birth Storbakken, assigned to the 159th Medical Company (Air Ambulance) at Wiesbaden, said he couldn't recall any specific emotions he had while helping deliver the baby.

"I guess you don't really think about what's going on until it's all over," he said. Capt. Richard Mangini, the executive offic-er of the 68th Medical Company, of which Storbakken is a part, said in-air births are a rarity. And it was even more special because o was delivering the baby

"He's our youngest and probably most inexnerienced medic in terms of time on the job he said.

Storbakken said he's already received several good-natured jabs by his peers.

"Some of the guys have been calling me daddy," he said.

The real father and mother were expected to travel back to Salerno from Bagram on Monday with the newest member of their fam-

Equipment missing

NEW YORK - Looters systematically stole large amounts of equipment capable of making parts for nuclear arms in the weeks following the U.S.-led invasion of Iraq that ousted Saddam Hussein, a senior Iraqi official has told The New York Times.

Rights group: Abuses by U.S. date back to '02

BY VERENA DOBNIK The Associated Press

NEW YORK - Unreleased U.S. Army reports detailing the beating deaths of two Afghan men at the hands of American soldiers show that military prison abuses began in Afghanistan in 2002, and were part of a systemat-ic pattern of mistreatment, a human rights representative said

More than two dozen American soldiers face possible criminal prosecution — and one already is charged with manslaughter — in the deaths at the main U.S. detention facility in Bagram, just north of the Afghan capital of Kabul. As documented by the Army's Criminal Investigation Command, the men died a year before the photographed horrors at the Abu Ghraib prison in Iraq, according to John Sifton, the Afghanistan researcher for the New York-based Human Rights Watch

In a phone interview, Sifton said his group had obtained 20 pages of electronically scanned Army reports.

The American Civil Liberties Union sued to obtain the case files under the Freedom of Information Act, but the Army with-held portions of the records because of an ongoing investigation and possible charges.

On Saturday, a Pentagon spokesman, Lt. Col. Jeremy Martin, would say only that the cases from 2002 "were thoroughly investigated and people were punished appropriately

"The Bush Administration and the Pentagon describe the abuse problems as isolated incidents, not systematic, not part of a plan. he evidence shows otherwise." Sifton said. "Far from being isolated incidents, these beatings were part of a pattern of abuse

Members of the 519th Military Intelligence Battalion who set up intelligence operations at the Bagram facility did the same at the Abu Ghraib prison.

The two Afghan detainees died in December 2002 - a week apart - as reported in Army memos, with updates detailing their fate after they were can tured by Afghan forces and handed to the U.S. military.

There were several other deaths of Afghans in American custody before December 2002, Sifton said, "and we want more information.

"It's amazing," he said. "Nobody has been punished for this. "The command has recommended that 28 people be prosecuted for this, but only two have been charged so far."

The unreleased Army documents detail U.S. military investigations of the deaths of a man named Mullah Habibullah, about 30, and another identified only as Dilawar, a 22-year-old taxi driver with a 2-year-old daughter, according to Sifton.

The Army has publicly acknowledged the two deaths and announced in October that up to 28 U.S. soldiers face possible charges in connection with what ware ruled homicides of other countries at commission meetings.

But continuing disclosures about prisoner mistreatment dating back to last spring have required the administration to adopt a defensive strategy for the coming six-week conclav

As part of a damage control plan, U.S. delegates have devised a pro-active approach for the meeting. They will point to American efforts to hold accountable those responsible for behavior that the administration acknowledges has been reprehensible, U.S. officials say.

The scandals have triggered a spate of investigations and some low-level personnel have been punished. But thus far, senior military officers and civilian Pentagon officials have escaped blame Earlier this year, Cuba and Zimbabwe served on a five-nation working group signed to set part of the agenda this year's meeting.

Cuba tried to get fellow working group members to get the U.S. prisoner abuse scandal on the agenda but the effort fell short by a 3-1 vote, with Zimbabwe abstaining. This, however, will not prevent that issue from being aired during the commission's deliberations.

Cuban Foreign Minister Felipe Perez Roque raised the possibili-ty last week that Cuba will introduce a resolution at the commiscondemning the United States for prisoner mistreatment.

Johnny Spann, father of slain CIA officer Mike Spann, pauses at his son's gravesite at Arlington National Ceme

Slain CIA agent's father hunts for answers about son's death

By JEFFREY MCMURRAY The Associated Press

ARLINGTON, Va. - Johnny Spann stood in gently falling snow and wistfully recalled the day his son, CIA officer Johnny Micheal "Mike" Spann, lingered among the tombstones at Arlington National Cemetery, studying each inscription and testing his sister Tanva's patience.

"Mike, let's go," she implored. "They're all the "No, Tanya, they're not," the younger Spann replied. "There are stories behind them It is Mike Spann's story that draws Johnny Spann to Arlington now. There is no greater objective for the grieving father these days than gathering the facts behind the uprising on Nov. 25, 2001, at the makeshift prison in Afghanistan where his son became the first American casualty of the Afghan war

Spann, a 56-year-old real tate company owner from Winfield. Ala., visited Mike Spann's grave last month for the third time in as many days. The elder Spann placed flowers and contemplated the chain of events that put his son in a national cemetery Upon returning to his rental car at the roadside, he wiped tears from his eyes.

"Even after four years, it doesn't get any easier," Spann said.

Articulate and folksy, with combed-back hair that is two shades of gray. Spann thumbs through a sheaf of documents and explains his son's last living moments with methodical calm. It is the same trait he displayed daily at the trial of John Walker Lindh. the American fighting alongside the Taliban Spann is conducting his own investigation into the origins of the riot at the prison in Mazar-e-Sharif where suspected Taliban supporters were held. U.S. government agencies, Spann said, are not inclined to piece together the entire story

By investigating for himself, "No lies get told and nothing gets covered up," he said. "I've got more at but they have. I want to know."

During his visit to Washington, Spann shared with

The Associated Press a videotape that shows the two hours leading up to the fateful riot.

Spann contends the last two minutes of footage prove the uprising began with a planned grenade attack inside the prison building rather than a spontaneous scuffle outside where his son was interviewing prisoners, including Lindh.

The distinction could be critical in Lindh's quest to get clemency for his 20-year prison term. One of the most serious charges against Lindh was that the uprising was planned the night before, yet he did not warn Spann

At trial, Lindh claimed no knowledge of the riot plot. The judge seemed to agree. If there were evidence that Lindh was responsible for the younger Spann's death, the judge said, then a plea bargain would not have been accepted that spared Lindh more serious charges, such as murder or treason. Spann's father is convinced that such evidence exists. He refers to Lindh as "hard core al-Qaida" and says if Lindh really wanted to help a fellow American, he would have snoken up that morning

Because he did not, Spann contends, Lindh was complicit in the younger Spann's death. Some day, the father is hoping to prove this legally, in an attempt to get Lindh's plea bargain thrown out.

An intelligence official, speaking on the condition of anonymity, said the circumstances surrounding the incident at the prison were reviewed. The offi cial said some prisoners burst out of the building fir-ing weapons while Spann and a colleague were interviewing prisoners outside.

Spann said the doctors told him that his son charged toward the prison building - right into a trap — when the grenade went off

Later, Spann said, he reviewed autopsy reports that showed his son had two bullet wounds to the head. That indicates a method of death co with an execution-style slaying, Spann said. 'That doesn't sound like two people in a fight getting shot," Spann said. "That sounds like one guy is on his knees or something getting shot.'

Two Marines wounded

KABUL, Afghanistan - Militants armed with rockets and machine guns ambushed Marines patrolling in eastern Afghanistan, wounding two of the American troops, the military said Sunday.

The patrol came under attack on Saturday in an area north of the city of Jalalabad and close to the Pakistani border, the U.S. military said. The assailants quickly retreated, it said.

The two injured Marines continued with their mission after treatment at the scene for shrapnel wounds

U.S. and Afghan government troops clash regularly with militants in southern and eastern Afghanistan, where Taliban-led rebels have maintained a stubborn insurgency since 2001.

While attacks have declined in recent months, Taliban officials have vowed to step up their cam-paign with the melt of the winter snow, despite high-profile peace overtures from U.S. commanders and Afghan leaders.

Daily-life therapy: Home ec for amputees a regular stop for injured soldiers and Marines who come to Walter Reed during their long recovery after Rumblings of discontent hinder new Iraqi government 44 Well, if they (the new assembly) cannot form a government, then

BY ALISSA J. RUBIN Los Angeles Times

BAGHDAD - With Iraqis increasing concerned about a security vacuum, the man who is expected to become the next prime minister on Saturday defended the winning parties' inability to form a government nearly six weeks after millions of people risked their lives to vote.

an interview, Ibrahim al-Jafaari, the nominee of the slate that won the most votes in the Jan 30 election, said it could take two more weeks to close a deal.

Behind the scenes, the two largest vote-getters, al-Jafaari's Shiite-dominated United Iraqi Alliance and the Kurds, are engaged in frantic negotiations. The in frantic negotiations. are meeting almost groups around the clock, and there has been constant maneuvering as the two try to find a position that

But ordinary Iraqis, frightened by two large suicide bombings this month that killed at least 200 people, are questioning why they braved insurgents' threats to cast their votes

Mohammed Saddoun, ashopkeeper, stood in front of his storefront grocery last week lamenting the slow progress by the newly elected National Assembly's in forming a government.

"I am not only frustrated - I am ready to burst with anger, Saddoun said. "We put our souls in the ... palms of our hands and went to the ballot centers.

"Well, if they (the new assembly) cannot form a government, then I think they are not qualified to manage the country's affairs. This vacuum of power increases the number of terrorist acts, it opens the way for the terrorists." Throughout Baghdad, one of the most mixed cities in Iraq, there are rumblings of discontent and cynicism about the new government. even though many people here voted for one of the three parties that took the most votes - the United Iraqi Alliance; the Iraq party of interim Prime Minister Ayad Allawi; or the Kurdish Party

The doubts are deeper among those who did not vote - supporters of anti-American cleric Muqtada al-Sadr and many Sunni Muslims who feel they have been left out of the political equation. At stake is the relative power of the different slates, control over positions in the government, and policies on some of the most conus issues in Iraq, such as control of the oil-rich city of Kirkuk and the power of the provinces relative to the central government.

"The Kurds are making de-mands no one can grant and still keep the support of the Iraqi peo-nle." said Jaber Habib, a professor of political science at Baghdad University.

In the interview Saturday, al-Jafaari signaled that the alliance did not feel bound to adhere strictly to the transitional administrative law, known as the TAL.

The TAL has many positive sides ... but there are also many negative aspects to it ... or missing aspects of the TAL," al-Jafaari said. "Since we are coming to the new constitution, we are trying to bridge those gaps. But we can make use of the posi-tive parts of it."

U.S. veterans of the Battle of Iwo Jima and a hand ful of their Jana. nese counterparts met at the Re-union of Honor monument on a

This year was the 60th anniversary of one of World War II's bloodiest battles. More than 100,000 U.S. troops fought to take the island, suffering more than 26,000 casualties including more than 6,800 deaths. Fewer than 1,000 of the 22,000 Japanese defenders survived.

Iwo Jima was strategically important to the U.S. bombing campaign of Japan. Once taken, fighter planes could be based there to escort bombers on missions returning Former Japanese Prime Minister Yoshiro Mori said the two countries are working together for world peace and security. "I believe that our cooperation is a great tribute to the spirits of Japanese and American soldiers who died on this island," said Mori, who said he learned much about peace by witnessing the veterans gather in friendship.

After the speeches, U.S. and Japanese officials placed wreaths at the foot of the monument. Japa-nese officials made the symbolic offering to the fallen of pouring water over the marker. Rifles cracked in a 21-gun salute. The assembly then observed a 30-second moment of silence; the only sounds were of the wind blowing the grass and distant waves pounding the black beach.

Pope leaves Rome hospital

BY AIDAN LEWIS The Associated Press

ROME - With thousands cheering him on, Pope John Paul II returned to the Vatican on Sunday, two weeks after undergoing throat surgery to ease his breathing problems and hours after greeting pilgrims in a raspy voice that raised hopes he would fully

The 84-year-old pope crossed himself just before he left Rome's Gemelli Polyclinic hospital in a gray Mercedes minivan with tinted windows rather than in the glass-paneled popemobile he used after a previous hospitalization last month

Patients in robes ventured out onto their balconies to bid the pope farewell, and cries of "Viva il Papa!" ("Long live the pope!" were heard as the van made the trip back to the Holy See.

Earlier Sunday, the pope spoke just a few words to the faithful gathered beneath his 10th-floor hospital suite, waving and making the sign of the cross with a steady hand

"Dear brothers and sisters, thank you for your visit," he said, reading from a sheet of paper. "To everyone, have a good Sunday and a good week

It was the first time since his Feb. 24 operation to insert a breathing tube in his windpipe that John Paul addressed the faithful in remarks carried live. In three previous appearances, the pope had remained silent.

The Vatican's brief statement announcing his release made clear that the none was not cured but was well enough to continue his recovery back at St. Peter's.

The Holy See had said last week that John Paul would be released in time for Holy Week celebrations, which begin on March 20 with Palm Sunday and culminate a week later with Easter.

The Holy See did not say whether the breathing tube had been removed or replaced with another type designed to make it easier for him to speak. Its next health update was expected on Monday.

The pope's speaking difficulties are complicated by Parkinson's disease, raising concerns over John Paul's ability to communicate and guide the world's 1 hillion Roman Catholics

The senior Syrian officer said about 4.000 soldiers had crossed the border into Svria since the pullout began on Tuesday and the remaining 10,000 were in Lebanon's eastern Bekaa Valley.

"Another 4,000 soldiers in Lebanon's central mountains have redeployed to the Bekaa region.

This is in addition to 6,000 troops already stationed in the Bekaa," the military official said on condition of anonymity. He said the fate of the 10,000 troops remaining in the Bekaa would be discussed by the April 7 military commission.

Lebanese Foreign Mahmoud Hammoud also said the joint military commission would set the "duration, time and location in these matters." Hammoud did not mention a specific date for the meeting, but the officer said it was to be held on April 7.

Hammoud made his remarks after meeting with U.N. envoy Terje Roed-Larsen in Beirut, a day after Roed-Larsen had visited Assad

President Bush, who repeatedly has called for a full Syrian with-drawal from Lebanon, wants Syria to move out before Lebanon's parliamentary elections scheduled to take place in April and May.

Asked if the final withdrawal could take place before the elections, Hammoud said it was up to the joint military commission to decide.

Some say U.N. rights commission needs reform to regain credibility

BY SAM CAGE The Associated Press

GENEVA - The U.N. Human Rights Commission must reform itself to restore its sinking credibility, say rights groups who accuse the worst-offending countries of using their membership in the agency to protect each other from condemnation.

"The commission has become a refuge for governments like Sudan, which should be in the dock rather than on the top U.N. rights body " said Kenneth Roth executive director of the New York-based Human Rights Watch

The U.N. commission — which starts its annual six-week session Monday Monday — must address long-standing problems, in particular that some of its 53 member states "routinely resort to double standards in addressing country situations." officials of Amnesty International said

Several possible changes have been suggested, including extending participation in the watchdog icy to all U.N. members, or ex cluding those with noor records of their own.

Under U.N. rules, members are picked by regional groups. Current member states that have been criticized for their records include China, Cuba, Nepal, Russia and Zimbabwe.

'The commission must focus on protecting human rights, instead of blocking criticism of members that commit serious rights abuses," Roth told reporters last week

A high-level U.N. panel has reported that the commission's ability to promote respect for human rights "has been undermined by eroding credibility.'

About half the commission's current members will attend this session "not to promote human rights, but to undermine them."

and this is reducing the credibility of the whole United Nations organization, Roth said.

"There is a question of whether the commission in its current form is a viable method of protect-ing human rights," Roth told reporters. The most important issue at this year's meeting is the threat to human rights posed by governanti-terror campaigns. Roth said

Campaigners called on the commission to condemn treatment of detainees by the United States and to ask that Washington give ndependent monitors acce terrorism suspects. Human Rights Watch is asking the commission to appoint a monitor with a three-year mandate to address terror and counter-terror issues. Exclusion of evidence (obtained through torture) is another matter we hope the commission will give due attention to," Amnesty's Peter Splinter said.

Europeans probe CIA 'renditions

BY CRAIG WHITLOCK The Washington Post

MILAN, Italy - A radical Egyptian cleric known as Abu Omar was walking to a Milan mosque for noon prayers in Feb-ruary 2003 when he was grabbed on the sidewalk by two men, sprayed in the face with chemicals and stuffed into a van. He hasn't been seen since.

Milan investigators, annear to be close to identifying his kidnappers. Last month, officials showed up at Aviano Air Base in northern Italy and demanded records of any American planes that had flown into or out of the joint U.S.-Italian military installation around the time of the abduction. They also asked for logs of vehicles that had entered Italian authorities suspect the Egyptian was the target of a CIA-sponsored operation known as rendition, in which terrorism suspects are forcibly taken for interrogation to countries where torture is practiced.

The Italian probe is one of three official investigations that have surfaced in the past year into renditions believed to have taken place in Western Europe. Although the CIA usually carries out the operations with the help or blessing of friendly local intelli gence agencies, law enforcement authorities in Italy, Germany and Sweden are examining whether U.S. agents might have broken local laws by detaining terrorist suspects on European soil and subjecting them to abuse or maltreatment.

The CIA has kept details of rendition cases a closely guarded secret, but has defended the controversial practice as an effective and legal way to prevent terrorism. Intelligence officials have testified that they have relied on the tactic with greater frequency since the Sept. 11, 2001, attacks.

The Bush administration has received backing for renditions from governments that have been criticized for their human rights records, including Egypt, Jordan and Pakistan, where many of the suspects are taken for interrogation. But the administration is getting a much different recention in Europe, where lawmakers and prosecutors are questioning whether the practice is a blatant violation of local sovereignty and human rights.

Iran: Europe moving too slowly on nuclear talks

China testing AIDS vaccine on humans

BEIJING - China has begun conducting the first stage of testing of a new AIDS vaccine on eight volunteers, the government said.

The testing began Saturday, when the volunteers received physical checkups and signed waivers, the official Xinhua News Agency said.

A total of 49 volunteers between the ages of 18 and 50 will be part of the tests, to take place in three stages, said Xinhua, citing Chen Jie, director of the disease control agency in southern China's Guangxi region.

said. It didn't say what the stage was meant to test, but said the second would cover the "immune nature and safety of the vaccine."

The agency didn't give any other details of the tests. Chinese drug regulators approved the tests last Novem-

At that time, state media said the vaccine, already tested on monkeys, was developed by Chinese scientists who have studied the genetics of the AIDS virus since 1996. China says it has 840,000 people infected with the AIDS virus and 80,000 with the full-blown disease. But health experts say the true figures are much higher and warn that China could have 10 million people infected by 2010 unless it takes urgent action.

After years of denying that the disease was a problem, the communist government has become more open about its AIDS epidemic, though activists are still regularly detained and harassed

In the world's biggest study of an experimental AIDS vaccine, Thai and U.S. researchers have been testing a combination of two drugs on 16,000 That volunteers since 2003.

JERUSALEM - Hamas will conduct secret primaries to choose its candidates for parliamentary elections in July, the Islamic militant group's first major electoral test, a West Bank leader said Sunday.

Over the weekend, Hamas announced it is participating in the elections, challenging Palestinian leader Mahmoud Abbas' Fatah movement, which has dominated Palestinian politics for four decades

Hamas' decision to compete, coupled with its observance of an unofficial truce with Israel, is a major step in what some see as the group's gradual transformation into a political party.

Hamas is expected to make a strong showing in the election, but it remains unclear to what degree it will become involved in the Abbas government, including future negotiations with Israel

Rice reiterates that she will not run for president

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON - Secretary of State Condoleezza Rice described herself Friday as "mildly pro-choice" and "kind of libertarian" on abortion as she once again ruled out running for Rice told The Washington Times last week she "can't imagine" running to succeed her boss and that she is "not trying to be elected." But she said she knows people are talking about the possibility, and did not rule it out when pressed repeatedly. The State Department released a transcript of the interview Saturday.

She closed the door in appearances on Sunday talk shows, telling NBC's "Meet the Press," "I will not run for president of the United States.

"I won't run." she told ABC's "This Week." "I won't. How's that? Is that categorical enough?'

The Republican platform is strongly anti-abortion, and abortion opponents play a big role in many primaries. Rice explicated her views when a questioner from the newspaper told her that the written record was murky "If you go back to 2000 when I helped the president in the campaign," she said, "I said that I was, in effect, kind of libertarian on this issue. And meaning by that, that I have been concerned about a government role in this issue. I am a strong proponent of parental choice — of parental notification. I am a strong proponent of a ban on late-term abortion. These are all things that I think unite people and I think that that's where we should be. I've called myself at times mildly pro-choice.' Many Republicans have expressed curiosity about her views on social issues as she assumed a higher profile and as it became increasingly clear that the early field for 2008 had no obvious Bush successor.

Federal court upholds most FCC phone number-switching rules

WASHINGTON - A federal court on Friday upheld the bulk of Federal Communications Commis-sion rules that allow consumers to keep their phone numbers when they switch providers.

Exhibit visitors also learn that doctors were called "leeches" in Old English because they used leeches to suck the blood of patients they were treating. The practice is not totally dead.

The classrooms of kids who file through could watch it spelled out on the blackboard back at school. But this way, museum officials hope, they will remember.

Texas OKs cupcakes in classrooms

The Associated Press

AUSTIN, Texas — Amid a tense education funding debate, Texas House members paused Wednesday to take up a matter dear to school kids everywhere: cuncakes.

Legislators in a unanimous recorded vote cleared the way for public school students to bring the sweet treats — complete with candy sprinkles — to celebrate their birthdays. "We have an opportunity to really make the children happy here," said Rep. Jim Dunnam, a Waco Democrat, asking fellow House members to approve the measure requested by his school-age daughter, Lauren.

Texas Agriculture Commissioner Susan Combs, whose agency oversees the state's school lunch program, imposed new healthy food rules aimed at limiting or eliminating junk food and food that competes with cafeteria fare.

In August, soon after setting the new rules, Combo issued a "cupcake clarification" stating that cakes and cupcakes could brought to school for birthdays. The agriculture department did, however, recommend that birthday parties be scheduled after the last lunch period.

Study finds media-saturated youth

A new study has found young people ages 8 to 18 have an unprecedented amount of media in their daily lives and surroundings, spending up to six and a half hours a day in media-related activities.

Kids' rooms loaded with new technology

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — It wasn't too long ago that a kid with a stereo and television in his room might have been the coolest on the block. Now, that just makes him one of the crowd.

In the past five years, many children's rooms have evolved into multimedia centers, with cable or satellite hookups, computers and video game consoles.

For instance, 20 percent of youngsters age 8 to 18 can surf the Web from their bedrooms, double the figure from 1999, according to a Kaiser Family Foundation survey released Wednesday.

That has helped turn kids into "media multitaskers," researchers suggest. Nearly one-third of kids say they chat on the phone, surf the Web, instant message, watch TV or listen to music "most of the time" while doing their homework.

What effect this behavior has on the often fragile ability of kids to focus is unclear because detailed research is fairly new, said Vicky Rideout, the foundation vice president who directed the study. Some of the blame — or praise

Rocker says he's happy to be drug free

Velvet Revolver frontman Scott Weiland says he is off drugs for good, according to the April issue of Esquire

Weiland, whose band won a Gram my last month, credits his sobriety of more than a year to seeing his second marriage crumble because of his addiction.

Weiland, 37, said his "preoccupation with catching a buzz" began in his early teens, when he began drinking liquor. He tried cocaine in high school and had moved on to heroin by the time he was 24 and touring with his previous group, Stone Temple Pilots, saying it made him feel safe and more confident about his music

He said he was motivated to clean up his act and try to get his family back after two arrests in 2003 - one for h oin and cocaine possession and the other for driving under the influence. "Right now, for the first time in my life, I'm finally happy," the singer told the magazine.

such freedom -

BY NANCY MILLS New York Daily News

HOLLYWOOD n an ideal world, Robin Williams would have been born a cartoon.

After all, merely human roles rarely give him the chance to free-associate, deliver dozens of accents and leap through his imagination the way no regular peron ever does. And, let's face it, when he starts doing his sh tick offstage, he occasionally wears out his welcome.

With his outsize personality, it's little wonder that Williams has a serious affinity for the animated world. He even took a stand for SpongeBob SquarePants on Oscar night, arriving with his mouth taped shut because producers rejected his plan to sing a satirical song about the undersea character

"They tell me now that SpongeBob is gay," Williams said, referring to a conservative religious group's criticism that the 'toon had a "pro-homosexual" agenda.
"SquarePants is not gay," Williams told the Kodak Theatre crowd. "TightPants maybe. SpongeBob HotPants? You go, girl

When he took the role of the Blue Genie in 1992's "Aladdin," Williams crafted one of the most indelible characters in animation history.

But with "Robots," it's possible that Williams addicts will begin calling him "Fender." Fender is Williams' first animated role since "Aladdin." The red robot with a coffeepot for a head may not look much like the 53-year-old comic, but they share a certain manic energy.

Fender is "a Skid Row burn, a man living hand to foot who puts the 'funk' in dysfunctional," Williams says. He also talks nonstop - sound familiar? - and keeps losing body parts to create the physicality I could never get near "You get a bit of carte blanche," he adds. "I love doing the voices. I can play and create. You can't find too many parts that allow you such freedom — and it's easier to look at myself.

The performance makes use of Williams' hyperactivity without, as he puts it, "my having to train. Animators can

Since he could easily supply the voices for an entire cast of animated characters, cartoons could be Williams' main source of income, if he didn't love doing standup comedy and making live-action movies. Two of the latter will open this year, the coming-of-age tale "House of D" (opening next month) and a black comedy, "The Big White."

Later this year, he'll start production on two more. One is the drama "The Night Listener," based on an Armistead Maupin story. The other is "RV," a comedy Williams says is about "a blue-state guy traveling in a red state."

For "Robots," director Chris Wedge says all he had to do was turn Williams loose.

"We'd bring Robin ideas and script pages, and he'd very politely read the words we'd written," Wedge says. "Then he'd start lifting off. He'd hit on something and go off for 20 minutes. The glass in the booth would be full of condensa-

Although Wedge admits, "We were able to use only about 1 percent of what he created," they did manage to include his riff on "Singin' in the Rain And the eventual DVD outtakes will probably feature a sequence in which Fender's unattached right hand tries to romance his equally on-the-loose left hand — in a heavy Hispanic accent.

Set in a computer-generated world inhabited by mechan-ical people, "Robots" tells the story of idealistic young Rodney Copperbottom (voiced by Ewan McGregor), who dreams of being an inventor and sets off for the big city with his father's blessing. Natu-44 I love doing the rally, his life does not go smoothly, even with Fender as a close friend.

Williams related to the follow-your-dreams scenario. "I loved the scenes between Rodney and his father because of my dad," he says.
"My dad told me, 'Do what you want to do. I will help you. If you want to be an actor, that's great. Just have a backup pro-"I actually went to one welding class, and the guy teaching it had one eye be-cause he lost the other in a welding accident," he adds. "But my dad was good with support. Thanks, Dad."

As a father of three — Zach. 21. Zelda.

15, and Cody, 13 — Williams is trying to be equally supportive. "Zach is studying linguistics right now," he says. "Maybe he'll open a syntax repair shop. Maybe he'll work for a few years and then study law.

"Cody has got a real wry sense of humor," he adds. "He writes very layered, intense poetry. And Zelda has the voices." She'll appear with her father in "House of D."

After some troubled years in which he fought through drug addiction and a messy divorce, Williams seems to be at a peaceful point in his life. Even he has noticed that his comic libido may finally be starting to ebb. "My wife, Marsha, says that if more than two people come into a room, I go into a certain mode," he says. "But the older I get, the mode gets less like, 'Hello! "It's tiring, but it's invigorating," he adds. "Drama is cathartic, but you feed off comedy. It builds you.

"And sometimes it works the other way. If an audience is not laughing, you'll feed off them — sometimes in an angry way, but sometimes in a challenging way. 'I can get these people. What is the key?

"Only later you find out they're deaf."

AK ANCHORAGE — A man denied alcohol during a United Airlines flight went on a rampage, breaking tray tables and other equipment, the FBI said

Brian A. Casias, 35. has been charged with interfering with the flight crew on Flight 711 from Denver to Anchorage.

Casias, of Commerce City, Colo... was heard swearing as he boarded the flight Tuesday, and the plane's captain advised him that he would not be served alcoholic beverages.

When a flight attendant denied Casias' request for a drink, he allegedly threw his tray of food down and spat repeatedly on the floor, the FBI said

Casias allegedly ripped the phone off the back of the seat and broke two tray tables, throwing them to the floor, the FBI said.

Casias also is accused of urinating on the floor of the lavatory, where he allegedly broke a handicapped bar and a changing table. He also is accused of swearing repeatedly and of smoking several cigarettes on the plane.

FI ARCADIA — Violent sexual predators at a privately operated treatment center brew their own alcohol, wander around "staggering drunk" and often have brutal fights, state investigators found.

A report by the Department of Children & Families' inspector general portrays the Florida Civil Commitment Center as a largely lawless place where rapists and child molesters freely consume alcohol and brawl

"All residents and staff interviewed admitted 'everyone' knows the residents make and consume homemade alcohol, called 'buck,' " the report completed last month said. "Two residents during the investigative interview admitted being intoxicated at the time."

Manners noticed something with red lights attached to a shower grate in the Troup residence hall on Feb. 6, the Chronicle reported. He and his roommate took the grate out of the ceiling and found the camera, which was connected to an adapter and electrical cord.

The two students brought the camera to the dorm's residential assistant who called campus security. Officers confiscated the equipment and inspected other bathrooms in the dorm

DMV files stolen

NORTH LAS VEGAS — Personal information from more than 8,900 people was stolen when thieves broke into a Nevada Department of Motor Vehicles office, officials said Friday

A computer taken during the break-in contained names, ages, dates of birth. Social Security numbers, photographs and signatures of southern Nevada residents who obtained driver's licenses between Nov. 25 and March 4 at the North Las Vegas office, state DMV chief Ginny Lewis said.

The DMV had previously maintained that the information on the computer stolen in Monday's break-in was encrypted, making it virtually useless to thieves.

But Lewis said Friday that Digimarc Corp., the Beaverton, Ore.,-based company that provides digital driver's licenses in Nevada, told her Thursday the information was not encrypted, and was readily accessible

Anti-Bush road rage

TAMPA — A man apparently enraged by a Bush-Cheney sticker on a woman's sport utility vehicle chased her for miles and tried to run her off the road while holding up an anti-Bush sign. police said.

Raise your right paw

AR BENTONVILLE — Prosecutors hoping for a witness in a murder case to roll over were barking up the wrong tree.

They sent out a batch of subpoenas for anyone who had contact with Albert K. Smith while he was jailed awaiting his murder trial.

One of those subpoenas went out to 5-year-old Murphy Smith — Smith's dog, it turned out.

The defendant had written his dog a letter from his cell, and that is how the shih tzu's name got on the witness list.

Prosecutors realized the mistake after the defendant's brother brought in Murphy to answer the subpoena and a deputy would not let them into the courthouse because no dogs were allowed.

Albert Smith is accused of shooting to death his ex-wife's boyfriend.

Twins neglected

LAKE CARMEL — A set of malnourished 7-year-old twins whose existence was a surprise to neighbors and school officials were found in a dirty, unkempt home in Putnam County, police said.

The twins, Cassidy and John Giordano, who weighed 41 and 30 pounds respectively, were being treated for malnourishment and isolation at Westchester Medical Center in Valhalla.

Their parents, Eda and James Giordano of Lake Carmel, were each charged with two counts of endangering a child and were released without bail. Their phone is unlisted and Town Court records did not show an attorney of record.

Chief Donald Smith of the Town of Kent police force, which covers Lake Carmel, said it had probably been several years since the children had left the house.

Drug blamed in murder

DENVER — Nobody disputes that Danny Pommerville beat his 64-year-old grandmother to death with wine bottles last August, leaving her to die in a pool of blood and fleeing the state in her car.

But a defense attorney for the 24-year-old man told jurors that her client was in a PCP-induced rag

"He snapped. He flipped. The PCP kicked in," Deputy Public Defender Cynthia Mares said. "His grandmother was telling him that he was a loser and that he should be in prison the rest of his life, and he snapped. He doesn't remember most of what happened."

Pommerville is on trial on charges of first-degree murder in the death of his grandmother, Jane Mazza

Animal abuse sentence

CA RIVERSIDE, Calif. — The co-defendant of a former animal rescuer, who pleaded guilty in January to child-endangerment and multiple animal-cruelty charges, has been sentenced to 180 days in custody and four years' probation.

Marla Jean Smith was ordered to start serving her sentence on weekends beginning April 1. Smith helped former partner John Weinhart operate the defunct Tiger Rescue sanctuary. State officials testified during Weinhart's trial that they found one of the couples' children living in a home filled with trash and animal feces.

Officials also found malnourished tiger and leopard cubs in an attic, two alligators in a bathtub, two juvenile tigers in a patio and powerful animal tranquilizers, including PCP, in an unlocked refrigerator.

Street taxi getaway

OGDEN — Police said it seemed more like a movie plot than real life when a taxi driver became the reluctant wheel in for a suspected bank robber's getaway attempt.

The hunt for Donald Archambault, 53, who was suspected of robbing a Salt Lake City bank, ended 30 miles north of Ogden. Archambault bailed out of the cab and was arrested by waiting police.

Cabbie Ali Ahmed didn't realize his customer was wanted until he got a call on his cell phone from a police detective.

Ahmed's fears escalated when the suspect allegedly told him "he would empty his gun" if Ahmed turned him in to police. The suspect didn't know that Ahmed was talking to a detective throughout much of the Interstate 15 ride.

The group's leaders, Kevin L. Gray, 33, and Rodney L. Moore, 39, were convicted last year after an eight-month trial. Gray was sentenced Wednesday to 26 concurrent life terms, plus 285 years. Moore received 14 concurrent life sentences, plus 135 years. Four men who were convicted last May also were sentenced to multiple life terms.

The Murder Inc. gang is believed responsible for at least 31 killings between 1988 and 1999 as part of a quest to dominate the District of Columbia's cocaine and heroin markets, the U.S. attorney's office said.

Help for mental health

I am an Army Reserve social work officer, currently stationed in Iraq as part of the 1835th Medical Detachment (Combat Stress Control). I thank Stripes for the paper's continued advocacy on mental health issues. In the past eight months I have been grateful to read the many articles educating soldiers about combat stress and post-traumatic stress disorder.

I am writing concerning the Feb. 28 arti-cle titled "Guard's top NCO focuses on mental health of troops" (Mideast edition; "Top NCO in Guard focuses on mental health of troops," European edition). I ap-plaud Command Sgt. Maj. John D. Gipe's concern for soldiers on this issue. Although the article continues to shine a spotlight on the growing concern for mental health care for soldiers, it failed to mention resources that are available for National Guard and Reserve soldiers. True. guardsmen and reservists can utilize mental health programs on military installations, but they also are entitled to benefits through the Department of Veterans Affairs. A variety of programs and services in mental health are available for all honorably discharged veterans. The VA offers both inpatient and outpatient psychiatric services, programs that specialize in the treatment of post-traumatic stress disorder or substance abuse homeless veteran programs and vocational rehabilitation programs. These services are provided not only in large cities but also in smaller, community-based outpatient clinics.

Under Title 38, United States Code, 1710(e)(1)(D) and Veteran Health Care Directive 2002-049, the Department of Veteran Affairs provides two years of health care (including mental health care) to all soldiers from their date of discharge, if they served in a combat zone. The two years of free care is regardless of whether the condition or illness was caused by military service. If the illness or injury is caused by military service, the veteran can submit a claim for service-connected disability. Once a veteran is service-connected for a condition, the VA can provide care without cost to the veteran

Although I am not an official VA spokesperson, I want to help get the message out to soldiers that these benefits are avail-ists, has rejoined the civilized nations of the world. Libya has decided it prudent to change its terrorist-supporting ways. And Iraq fails to be the potential nexus between terrorists and weapons of mass destruction that it certainly was before the U.S. military efforts.

The insurgents in Iraq are losing and they know it. How do I know? Here in Baghdad, I talk with optimistic Iraqis daily. They understand that outsiders are coming into their country to cause trouble. These Iraqis want what almost everyone else in the civilized world wants: a chance to live a peaceful life and provide for their family. The insurgents will never overcome this basic human desire.

If we stay the course, we will achieve neace, with justice, throughout the world, But it will probably take a generation or more of diplomacy, economic assistance and, where necessary, military action.

The professor feels it necessary to insult me and the majority of Americans who understand what's going on by claiming "re ality has yet to fully sink in" and that I "continue to snooze." We on the ground understand a lot that the professor, enjoying the peace and security that he would deny others, does not. It is, indeed, liberals like him who are going to make sticking with this effort even more difficult than it already is. I ask: Whose side are you really on, professor?

Why black enlistments dropped

In response to the March 4 analysis "Study shows Army's black enlistments drop' by Tom Philpott: The spiral downfall in the number of African-Americans in all branches of the military is without a doubt due to all social and political elements that young African-American soldiers can't overcome due to pigmentation barriers and the command leadership.

The bonuses, educational benefits and all the other perks that come with enlistment and re-enlistment do not meet the standards of our pride and dignity. Some of us in theater are professionals in various career fields in the civilian world, but we will comply with our duties and obligations while wearing the uniform.

We African-American New Yorkers have pride and not an ego; we step to the side until called upon because it is guaranteed that we have been exposed to the environment or situation at hand. I inform my solders that at death you won't leave home, you'll be going home.

In order to keep us from becoming too attached to the military, it allows us to feel a significant amount of discontent and dis-satisfaction. We're not completely happy here because we're not supposed to be.

Last but not least, African-Americans are now attending institutions of higher learning, as they've done in the past; African-Americans have open options for success — not just sports, dance and music. I've been blessed with a God of my understanding, a two-parent household and men tors to guide me in the path that enables me to see clearly what others miss or intentionally avoid, and sidestep.

Support for 'scientific theory'

I am sure Stripes editors are being bombarded by pro-creationists again, so here I am again to address reality vs. belief: Bravo for [Lakenheath Middle School science teacher] Greg Klaes for holding ground on evolution as scientific theory in the March 6 article "DODDS parents, teachers debate evolution vs. creationism' (Europe edition).

Schools need to reinforce what scientific method is, and why we need to separate re-ality from belief. Scientific method relates to data that is verifiable (real) and reliable (repeatable). We need to teach what is real in the schools, as opposed to the various beliefs that people have. Since our schools teach everyone from varying back-grounds, we must stick with scientific method at school.

For religion to "stop at the classroom door," to quote Klaes, is fitting, proper and respectful to all. America has too much diversity to become a theocracy around the beliefs of any one group.

Keep insightful 'Doonesbury'

After reading the recent rant (Trudeau strip a 'piece of crap,' " letter, Feb. 28) against the marvelously insightful, frequently irreverent and always entertaincomic "Doonesbury" (i.e., fleft-wing-subcutaneous-slandering piece-of-crap"), I am reminded of a quote from a small Vermont newspaper editor. While not intending to impugn the author of the rant, that Vermont editor wrote, "One of the values of the letters to the editor section of a newspaper is that it can open the mouths of fools."

Keep "Doonesbury" and your letter to the editor section. Both provide a great service in support of freedom of speech and the press for which we are all fighting.

Painful truth is, Bush's declaration untrue

resident Bush declared in his State of the Union address, "Torture is never acceptable, nor do we hand over people to countries that do torture." Considering what's come to light since then, the most charitable con clusion is that Bush is completely out of the

In recent weeks, past and present admin-istration officials have confirmed that since September 2001 the Central Intelligence Agency has dispatched between 100 and 150 terror suspects to countries where fine points of law and human rights don't stop beatings, drugging or long isolation.

Before the Sept. 11 attacks, the CIA occasionally engaged in this indefensible practice, known as "extraordinary rendition. But afterward. Bush gave the agency wider license to export prisoners in terror-related cases who hadn't been tried or even charged with any crime. Despite his State of the Union declaration, the president apparently has not revoked that au-

IIS law and international conventions bar sending prisoners to another nation unless there are strong assurances of humane treatment

The CIA says with a straight face that it gets those assurances before delivering suspects to jailers in Egypt, Syria, Saudi Arabia, Jordan and Pakistan — countries that have such abysmal human rights are a joke.

Bush has argued that tough new rules of engagement are necessary to fight stateless terrorists. But morality aside, what intelligence of value have U.S. officials gleaned from suspects who've been handed off to modern-day dungeons?

A case in point: In 2002, federal agents arrested Maher Arar, a Syrian-born Cana-dian engineer, at John F. Kennedy International Airport in New York because his name appeared on a terrorist watch list. Although Arar insisted that he was not a terrorist, the United States delivered him to Syrian interrogators. After months in a windowless room and regular beatings with thick electric cables, he said, he confessed to anything they wanted just to stop the torment. A year later, Arar was released without charges

This barbarism is why U.S. judges have refused to condone the indefinite detention of terrorism suspects. Yet the military still holds about 500 foreign nationals at the U.S. base in Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, Most have not been charged and have no lawyer, often after years in custody

Two American citizens have been held in military brigs. The evidence against U.S.-born Yaser Esam Hamdi was so flimsy that last year federal agents packed him off to his family in Saudi Arabia rather than present their case in court. This month, a federal judge ordered the administration to charge the second, Jose Padilla, WE'RE REWRITING THE FIRST AMENDMENT ON FREEDOM OF SPEECH TO READ...

...WE HAVE WAYS OF MAKING YOU TALK " OUTSOURCING TORTURE without access to a lawyer it's doubtful his or release him within 45 days, Government lawyers say interrogations produced a lot about Padilla's activities, including his relationship with al-Qaida leaders and his plans to blow up high-rise buildings.

Attorney General Alberto Gonzales said last week he may still prosecute him. But because most of Padilla's disclosures occurred while he was in military custody, statements would be admissible in court. These are only the practical issues. The more haunting problem with Bush's war on terrorism remains the moral one: A nation that considers itself a beacon of freedom seems unable to practice the respect for law and human rights it ardently preaches to others

Contra-indicated: Ortega again in Nicaragua mix has enough troubles in Latin America dealing with leftist autocrats in Cuba and Venezuela, consider this: A radical former revolutionary leader may be making a comeback in Nicaragua. Andres Oppenheimer

Daniel Ortega, the former Sandinista president who after the 1979 revolution confiscated the mansion of a wealthy businessman in the name of social justice and immediately moved in, recently crushed a massive movement within his party to hold primary elec-tions, and had himself declared presidential candidate for the November 2006 elec-

In Washington, Latin America watchers aren't amused: Ortega — in a rare power-sharing alliance with rightist former President Arnoldo Aleman, who is facing charges of illicit enrichment - already controls the Supreme Court, the electoral tribunal, the Comptroller's General of fice and Congress.

Although his negative ratings in Nicaragua are sky-high and his well-organized Sandinista party has historically had a hard time reaching out beyond its 35 percent hard-core support, Ortega could conceivably win next year's elections. "Right now, he is in a very strong posi-

'a senior U.S. official told me last week. "All he has to do is run against a di-vided field, and he is in."

Unlike the leftist presidents of Brazil, Uruguay and Chile. Ortega has shifted back to his radical 1980s rhetoric, and to what many describe as vintage Stalinist

Late last month, Ortega staged an internal coup within his party, and expelled pop ular former Managua Mayor Herty L wites, who was mounting a challenge to win the party's presidential nomination. Lewites, who was tourism minister during the Sandinista regime in the 1980s and was elected Managua mayor in 2000, is the country's most popular politician

A recent poll by Borge y Asociados shows that Lewites would win a general election with 40 percent of the vote. Among Sandinista sympathizers, he gets 75 percent of the vote, with 18 percent for Ortega.

Lewites called for a massive Sandinista rally March 6 to protest Ortega's internal coup, but Ortega had a sympathetic court deny him a permit to hold the demonstration. Lewites is challenging the Sandinista expulsion order, and has accused Ortega's goon squads of trying to kill him in a March 3 incident in front of a court where he was summoned to appear.

When I called Lewites last week, I got a message on his cellphone saying, "This is later that day, he said his troubles with Ortega started recently, "when Daniel [Ortega] saw that the public squares didn't belong to him anymore, after our massive (pro-Lewites) rallies in late February."

Ortega compared the popular ex-mayor with former Presidents Mikhail Gorbachev and Boris Yeltsin, who Ortega said had committed "crimes against humanity by destroying the Soviet Union. Lewites countered by charging that Ortega's hard-line backers had recently sold properties and made other business transactions worth more than $3.8 million

"Where did they get that kind of money from?" Lewites asks.

"Facing these accusations, and knowing that I could prove them, they decided to shut up, and expel me from the party.

"This is a fight between an ultra-radical orthodox wing of the party, and a democrat-ic wing," Lewites says. "We're not denying that we will be a leftist government. But it will be a leftist government a la [Chilean

President Ricardo] Lagos, or [Brazilian President Luiz Inacio] Lula da Silva.' Ortega is paying a price for his refusal to hold primary elections. Top Sandinista leaders are now backing Lewites.

"This is the most serious challenge Ortega has ever faced within his party," says Carlos Fernando Chamorro, a former Sand inista newspaper editor who publishes Confidencial, a political newsletter.

Still, Ortega's ruthless tactics may pay off. While Lewites is ahead in the polls, it's doubtful he could run a successful independent candidacy without the 500,000-member Sandinista party machinery

My conclusion: If the conservative parties are stupid enough - or corrupt enough — to field several candidates. Ortega could win. Nicaragua's democracy is already being kidnapped by a rightist-leftist alliance of mafiosi, and the Bush administration could soon have a major new headache in the region.

Handle past affair with class

Dear Annie: Five years ago, I took a painting class, "Raymond the teacher, was exceptional, and the warm supportive environment he created allowed me to have a breakthrough that changed not only how I felt about myself, but also about my ability to create art. I am eternally grateful to him.

A year after the class ended. I ran into Raymond at an art gallery. I was thrilled when he offered to look at some of my recent paintings.

While at my house, however, he made a pass at me. I was shocked (he's married), but I admit I allowed things to happen because I was so appreciative of his interest. We had five such meetings over the next two years, until I worked up the courage to end it. Raymond accepted my decision, but continued to stay in touch via phone and e-mail

WE'RE WORRIED ABOUT A DECLINE IN HOME-RUN PRODUCTION.

Texas Rangers second baseman Alfonso Soriano, who hit .280 with 28 homers last season, is 0-for-16 in exhibition games this spring.

Soriano struggling after lost offseason

Rangers 2B off to slow start in spring training because of recovery from left hamstring injury By STEPHEN HAWKINS

The Associated Press

SURPRISE, Ariz. - While Alfonso Soriano is at ease in the Texas Rangers' clubhouse this spring, he's off to a slow start on the field

Soriano had to overcome the shock last spring of being unexpectedly traded from the New York Yankees in the Alex Rodriguez deal. This year, he's coming off a lost offseason because of a left hamstring injury.

"I have my winter in the Dominican, I do nothing, just think about my leg," Soriano said Friday. "Just nothing. I was running like three days, got scared, so I said I'm going to stop because I don't want to hurt myself."

So there were no running and no workouts for the All-Star second baseman until just before he arrived in Arizona for spring training 31/2 weeks ago

After being held out of the first two exhibition games, Soriano is hitless in his first 16 at-bats with eight strikeouts in five games. He went 0-for-3 with a strikeout in a 6-4 loss to the Los Angeles Angels on Friday when he also made his first error

"I'm not worried about it, because it's more important for me to try to be healthy and think about my leg," Soriano said. "I have plenty of time, three more weeks. I have plenty of time to get ready. ... I feel so great, I'm running every day."

Soriano missed the final 16 games last season after being hurt Sept. 16 as he stole third base against Oakland

The team called the injury a strained hamstring, and it didn't require surgery.

Despite the slow start this spring, Soriano says he's not in pain. He insists that he'll be 100 percent by the season opener April 5 at the Los Angeles Angels.

The Rangers have no reason to

"I'd be concerned if he was having any pain," manager Buck Showalter said. "When he's through in the game, plays five or six inning ... he's running hard full speed down the line. It's more just kind of mentally getting over it, and getting over any residual effects of it '

Soriano wants to play every day, while Showalter is trying to rest his regulars a couple games a

That may be exactly what Soriano needs to getting going offensively. He hit .280 with 28 home runs and 91 RBIs last season

"I don't know if he's behind. He was the same way last year," hit-ting coach Rudy Jaramillo said. "He just has to keep swinging, get his timing down and go from there. He doesn't look maybe like he's canable but it's just timing

At least Soriano is beyond adjusting to a new team in last place. Last spring, he suddenly went from a World Series team to one coming off four last-place finishes - before its improbable nennant chase.

"I feel now a big difference this year," Soriano said. "Last year, I came in a new guy, like a rookie. I now know the players, and we played together last year. I feel more comfortable."

'Lights out Lidge,' ready for follow-up

Reliever was surprise for Astros during playoff run

BY JOEL ANDERSON The Associated Press

KISSIMMEE, Fla. - Maybe if Carlos Beltran had never come to Houston and Octavio Dotel had never gone to Oakland, Brad Lidge would still be just another promising reliever in the Astros' bullnen. But with the Astros bumbling their way through a season that started with World Series expectations, Houston managed to pull off a three-team trade that landed Beltran and sent Dotel to the A's During the ensuing playoff push that got Houston within a victory of its first World Series. Lidge turned an unexpected audition for the closer's role into a four-month showcase for one of the best young pitchers in the majors. He converted 29 of 33 save attempts during the regular season and was even better in the postseason, earning himself the nickname "Lights Out Lidge." The question now is whether

Lidge can do it for an entire sea-

"When you strike out the world and close out the last three months of the season for us, you're not going to sneak up on anybody," Astros manager Phil Garner said, "All the teams know what he can do."

When then-general manager Gerry Hunsicker decided to swing the trade for Beltran last June 24, it was a huge gamble. Beltran was a free agent who would be seeking lots of money once the season was over, and dealing Dotel to Oakland would mean the unproven — and often injured — Lidge would become Houston's closer.

Hunsicker pulled the trigger on the trade anyway, a last-ditch effort to rescue the season of a team seemingly headed to a disappointing finish.

Good move, it turned out, Lidge might have been as good, if not better than, Beltran down the stretch.

"Beltran was already considered a great player." Garner said. "but not too many people knew about Brad until the playoffs. Then they knew?

He led the majors with 17 saves after Aug. 15, and set an NL record for strikeouts by a reliever with 157. And once he was in the playoffs, Lidge took his game a step further, finishing with an ERA of 0.73 and 20 strikeouts fourth most ever in the playoffs

Houston Astros pitcher Brad Lidge converted 29 of 33 save attempts during the regular season in 2004, and was even better in the postseason, finishing with an ERA of 0.73 and 20 strikeouts in 121/3 innings.

Against St. Louis in the NL championship series, Lidge pitched an NL-record eight score-less innings against a team that led the league in runs scored. The Cardinals finished with only one hit and struck against Lidge. It was official: at just 27 and in his fourth month as a closer, Lidge merited comparison to his trio of idols Mariano Rivera, and Billy Wagner. "I'm just humbled by everything

han pened to me," Lidge said. "I can remember those games like they were vesterday.'

Lidge, 28, has only seemingly come a long way in a short amount of time. His road to the majors was repeatedly hindered by injuries and a deep pool of pitching talent in the Astros' organization

"Brad always had the talent," said Wagner, a three-time All-Star who was the closer in Houston from 1995-2003 before being traded to Philadelphia. "He's always had better overall stuff than anybody we've had or developed. He could throw things that most of us couldn't even get away with."

Until his first full year in the majors 2003 Lidge had every season ended pre-maturely by injuries: his right elbow in '98, right knee in '99, right elbow again in '00, right shoulder in '01 and a strained left muscle in his rib cage in '02.

Lidge had never pitched in relief until the 2003 season, when he was part of a strong bullpen that included himself, Dotel and Wagner, He went 6-3 with a 3.60 ERA, tied a club rookie record for games pitched in a season (78) and tied for fourth in the majors with 97 strikeouts.

Wells makes first start for Red Sox

David Wells made his Boston debut and began looking ahead to Opening Day.

Andy Pettitte is still waiting to make his first start of spring training.

Wells worked two solid innings during the Tampa Bay Devil Rays' 6-4 victory over the Red Sox on Saturday, then said he'd be happy to start opening night April 3 against his former team, the New York Yankees, if Curt Schilling isn't yet recovered from offseason ankle surgery.

"I don't mind taking the ball in any game no matter what, espe cially a big game, and the first game of the season is going to be a big game," said Wells, who now wears No. 3, the same number one of his favorite players, Babe Ruth wore with the Vankees

Pettitte was scratched from his scheduled start for Houston because of a sprained right ankle after falling down stairs at his apartment Friday.

"He's feeling pretty good today and it is not as swollen as we thought it would be." Houston manager Phil Garner said.

Pettitte tested the ankle in a brief session at the Astros' camp Saturday morning. 32-year-old left-hander is trying to rebound from an inju-ry-plagued 2004 season that included three trips to the disabled list because of elbow problems.

"He probably could have gone a little longer, but we didn't want to push it," Garner said. "We'll give him another bullpen session on Tuesday and maybe nitch him in a game later in the week

After going through rehab for the past eight months, Pettitte nitched three innings in a simulated game Tuesday.

Tim Redding replaced Pettitte and struck out six in four score-less innings to help Houston defeat the Cleveland Indians 7-3 in Winter Haven, Fla.

Report: Jeremy Giambi admits to steroid use

KANSAS CITY Mo - Former

major leaguer Jeremy Giambi, who played one injury-plagued season for the Boston Red Sox, admitted he used steroids, The Kansas City Star reported Sunday.

"It's something I did," Giambi told the newspaper. "I apologize. I made a mistake, I moved on, I kind of want it in the past. Giambi, the younger brother of

Yankees star Jason Giambi, signed a minor league contract with the Chicago White Sox on Tuesday

Jeremy Giambi broke into the big leagues in 1998 with Kansas City, then played with his brother in Oakland from 2000-01.

Jason Giambi won the AL MVP Award in 2000, and his younger brother had his best season the next year, hitting .283 with 12 homers and 57 RBIs in 371

The younger Giambi has also played for Philadelphia.

His last stint in the majors was in 2003, when he batted .197 in 127 at hats with the Red Soy He missed most of last season with a herniated disc. Signed by the Dodgers, he didn't play in a big ague game

While he did not specifically say his brother used steroids, Jeremy Giambi noted a news conference his brother had last month in New York during which he apologized profusely, but did not say why he was apologizing.

"If you don't know what he's apologizing for," Jeremy Giambi said, "you must've been in a coma for two years

Jeremy Giambi declined to be specific about his steroid use. He told the newspaper he wants to come clean about steroids and hones others will do the same

When he testified before the grand jury, Jeremy Giambi said he used steroids in cream and liquid form and injected human growth hormone and testosterone

The Yankees on Saturday declined a request by the Star to interview Jason Giambi.

In January, baseball adopted a harsher steroid-testing policy.

Selig unhappy about congressional hearing

PEORIA Ariz - Commission er Bud Selig is unhappy about the upcoming congressional hearing on steroids because he thinks baseball has already adopted a strong testing program. The House Government Reform Committee has subpoenaed seven current or former players and four baseball executives to testify at a hearing March 17. The commissioner's office has said it will fight the subpoenas

"I am very protective of the players, and there has to be a sense of fairness," Selig said Saturday. "If I sound a bit elevated, it is for that reason. We made agreements and we are doing the things we promised to do."

you all make that judgment," Selig told reporters during the Seattle Mariners' spring training game against the Texas Rangers.

Under pressure from Congress, baseball and its players agreed in January to a tougher steroid-testing program that added penalties for first-time offenders (10-day suspensions) and random, vear-round tests. 'It's an evolving policy. When we went to testing, it was called weak and toothless," Selig said. "But we started at 7 percent [testing positive], now we're down to 1-2 percent. I believe while this policy isn't exactly what I want, it's the best that could be done in collective bargaining.

"I'm comfortable and very confident in telling you that we will really reduce the usage

The previous policy called only for treatment after a first positive test. No player was suspended for steroid use in 2004, the first season of testing with penalties.

The players subpoenaed for eek's hearing are former stars Mark McGwire and Jose Canseco and current players Jason Giambi, Sammy Sosa, Curt Schilling, Frank Thomas and Rafael Palmeiro. Selig said he wasn't sure about any attempts by baseball officials to negotiate a deal with Congress that would excuse the players from testifying.

The commissioner, who ad-dressed a Senate panel about steroids last year, was not subpoe-naed, but said he was willing to attend the hearings

"I'll do whatever is in the best interest of the sport, and if I believe that's it, you bet I'll be there," he said. Players' association

Donald Fehr, Major League Baseball executive vice presidents Rob Manfred and Sandy Alderson, and San Diego Padres general manager Kevin Towers have been called to appear.

Nuggets, Lakers rally to win

Carmelo Anthony came out of his shooting slump when it count-

The Spurs' last points of the game came on a corner jumper by Tony Parker with 3:29 left that made the score 87-80.

you say, this is a big win." Duncan has a sprained right ankle, and Ginobili a slight groin

In Charlotte, Bryant capped his 21-point fourth quarter with a long jumper with 0.9 seconds left to lift Los Angeles over the Bobcats and give the Lakers consecutive road victories for ther first time this season.

Bryant finished with 32 points and nine assists for the Lakers, who trailed much of the way against the expansion Bobcats.

After struggling to 11 points on 4-for-12 shooting through three periods, Bryant hit six straight shots — including three three-pointers — and the deficit was down to 110-108 after his iumper over Keith Bogans with 2:45 left in the game.

Then, after closing to 116-115 on a tip-in by Jumaine Jones with 31 seconds left, the Lakers got the ball back with the chance to win it. Bryant did the rest, taking the ball near midcourt and dribbling toward the top of the key. He nump-faked, sending Bogans into the air, and rose above the Bob cats' guard to launch the shot.

The ball swished through the net, stunning the crowd.

Heat 90, Nets 65: Eddie Jones scored 14 of his 18 points in a decisive third quarter to help Miami win its eighth straight game and 12th in a row at home.

Shaquille O'Neal had 15 points and 11 rebounds for the Heat who allowed their lowest point total of the season Vince Carter scored 20 for the Nets, who managed just 26 points in the second half and lost for the fourth time in five games.

Warriors 105, Hawks 92: Mike Dunleavy and Jason Rich-ardson each scored 22 points and visiting Golden State set a team record with 18 three-pointers.

Dunleavy was 6-for-7 from three-point range and Baron Davis went 6-for-10 and scored 20 points. The Warriors, 18-for-33 overall on threes, became the fifth team to fall one shy of the NBA record set by Atlant against Dallas on Dec. 17, 1996.

Hornets 111, Bucks 107: J.R. Smith made three free throws in the final 4 seconds and finished with 16 points to lead New Orleans at home. Dan Dickau led the Hornets with 17 points, P.J. Brown had 16 oints and 13 rebounds, and Lee Nailon also had 16 points

Trail Blazers 80, Grizzlies 66: At Portland, Ore., Shareef Abdur-Rahim had 25 points and 10 rebounds to help give Kevin Pritchard his first victory as Portland's interim coach. Pritchard, the team's director of player personnel, lost his first four games after taking over the Blazers foll Cheeks' firing. following Maurice LAS VEGAS - Mark Martin moved into the lead when seemingly unstoppable Carl Edwards was sidelined by a flat tire, extending his record for Busch Series victories to 47 Saturday at Las Vegas Motor Speedway.

Martin picked up his second Busch win this season, following his victory at California two

Edwards, making just his sixth Busch start, shot away from the field after taking his first series pole and dominated for 125 of the 200 laps in the Sam's Town 300 until the right rear tire went down on lap 186, sending him spinning into the infield

Vikings sign ex-Packer Sharper

MINNEAPOLIS - The Minnesota Vikings signed veteran safety Darren Sharper to a four-year contract on Saturday.

Sharper, cut by the Green Bay Packers in a cost-cutting move last week, started at free safety the past six seasons and ranks fifth in team Sports history with 36 interceptions. He led the team with four intercenbriefs tions last year and scored three

No. 1 Illini make sure to win one for Weber

BY JIM PAUL

CHICAGO - Illinois had its 14-point lead shaved to two with 6 minutes to go. But the top-ranked Illini weren't going to let this game slip away

They wouldn't add a loss to coach Bruce Weber's tragic week-

Illinois (31-1) held Minnesota without a field goal for the final 4:05 on the way to a 64-56 victory Saturday and a trip to the Big Ten tournament championship game for the third straight season. The Illini will face Wisconsin, a 59-56 winner over Iowa.

The Illini also tied a school record for victories, matching the mark set by the 1988-89 Flyin' Illini team that went to Final Four.

'We say we're a family. That's what we emphasized all year, said forward James Augustine, who was the first to put an arm around his coach after the game. 'We're all with him

Weber coached the game less than 24 hours after his mother, 81-year-old Dawn Weber, died at Chicago hospital following emergency heart surgery. He said he never doubted he'd be on the sideline. "I'm proud of the kids and happy to be back in the champion-ship (game)," Weber said. "I don't want to be the story. The kids have got to be the story

The Illini wore black bands on their jerseys in memory of Dawn Weber, and the emotional drain showed early in what became a somewhat sloppy performance. They committed a season-high 23 turnovers and shot just 36 percent from the field. We were probably feeling a little too emotional," said Luther Head, who led Illinois with 14 points. "We're feeling the same way he's feeling." The Illini got going midway through the half and took a 14-13 lead on the first of Head's four three-pointers. A 14-0 run turned a 13-8 deficit into a 22-13 lead and Illinois led 30-26 at halftime.

Head's fourth three-pointer put the Illini ahead 49-35 with 12 minutes left. But Illinois missed its next four shots and committed three turnovers, allowing Minnesota to go on a 16-4 run.

Vincent Grier and Aaron Robin. son scored all 16 points.

Deron Williams broke Illinois' drought with a three-pointer, but Robinson hit a three-pointer and Grier dunked to make it 53-51. Roger Powell Jr. converted a three-point play that pushed the Illini lead back to five, and the Go-phers managed just three free throws down the stretch.

No. 23 Wisconsin 59, Iowa 56: Alando Tucker banked in the biggest shot of Wisconsin's season, hitting a running three-pointer at the buzzer to stun Iowa.

Tucker finished with 20 points on 7-for-12 shooting and Zach Morley added 17 for the Badgers (22-7). Greg Brunner led Iowa (21-11) with 18 points.

Hayes spun into the lane to hit the winning shot with 7.9 seconds left in overtime Saturday, giving the No. 4 Wildcats a 79-78 victor over LSU and a chance to play for another SEC tournament title. "Certainly, it gives us the belief that we can win close games, said Smith, the Wildcats' coach. Brandon Bass hit a miraculous shot for the Tigers as the buzzer sounded in regulation, forcing overtime with the score tied at 70 LSU built a five-point lead in the extra period, but it wasn't enough to hold off the Wildcats and the weight of history. Kentucky (25-4) will be going for its third straight SEC tourna-

After its last two championships, the Wildcats didn't even bother cutting down the nets. They may call for the scissors if they beat Florida on Sunday - especially with the way they survived the semifinals

New Mexico no longer on bubble

DENVER - The selection committee can stop worrying about New Mexico, A lot of NCAA tour. nament teams out there probably ought to start, though.

The Lobos made their invitation to the NCAAs a formality Saturday night, getting 28 points, 11 rebounds and four straight clutch free throws from Danny Granger in a 60-56 victory over No. 15 Utah in the Mountain West Conference championship game.

Playing as though their season was at stake - even though it probably wasn't by this point the second-seeded Lobos (26-6) iumped on Andrew Bogut and the top-seeded Utes (27-5) early and kept them an arm's distance away most of the way.

And when Bogut (19 points, 16 rebounds) triggered a 9-2 run that gave the Utes a 49-48 lead with 3:35 left - their first since midway through the first half — New Mexico responded. Alfred Neale slammed home a miss for a 50-49 lead David Chiotti made a move that felled Bogut and led to an easy layup.

After two Utah free throws made it 52-51, Granger made two huge baskets, forcing a shot over a defender under the basket for one score, then dribbling to the baseline and shaking loose from defender Marc Jackson for an open 15 footer that he buried for a 56-51 lead.

Bogut responded with a three-pointer with 21 seconds left, but Granger countered by sinking four free throws down the stretch to keep it a two-possession brate along with the thousands who followed them up Interstate 25 to watch them earn their first NCAA bid since 1999. The win capped off a day that began when New Mexico heat Iltah for the women's championship.

For the men, it was the ninth straight win and 12th in the past 13 Two of those wins have come against Utah, the league's regular-season champ, which will al-most certainly earn an at-large bid for its fourth straight trip to

But the Mountain West's bigest threat could very well be the Lobos, who won their first conference tourney since 1996 — when Dave Bliss was coach and they played in the Western Athletic Conference.

They were on the tournament bubble because of their low RPI rating (85th) and ultra-weak strength of schedule (298), but have more than put to rest all those misgivings over a torrid stretch that began with a win over UNLV at The Pit on Jan. 29.

Granger scored 18 of his points in the first half and well out-played Bogut, who was "held" to just 19 points by a defense that fronted him with Chiotti, then brought help from the back-side

Despite that success, the Lobos couldn't build their lead into double digits and when the Utes shut down Granger through most of the second half, it was clear this one would come down to the wire.

It did - but it was Granger, not Bogut, who wound up holding the trophy and being named the tour-nament's Most Valuable Player. The Lobos, who were serenaded by chants of "Never Rated!" from Utah fans in the pregame warmups, stayed around to cut down the nets. And by then, it was Lobo fans doing the chanting shouting "Over "NIT!" to the Utes. "Overrated!"

LOS ANGELES - Little Nate Robinson and 14th-ranked Washington kept whispering to Salim Stoudamire's Arizona teammates.

At the buzzer, the Huskies were the ones shouting with joy at winning the school's first

Pac-10 tournament title. Robinson scored six points - his only points of the second half - in the final 67 sec. onds as Washington unset of No. 8 Arizona 81-72 on Saturday despite a brilliant 37-point performance by the Wildcats' Damon Stoudamire. Robinson defended Stoudamire and compared it to playing with-out his hands. "You just got to run around and chase him." he said. "We said, 'He's going to score, but we can't let the role players get their 15 (points) and 8 (rebounds).

"You've got to keep telling the other guys,
'He doesn't want to nass you the ball,' and that's what we did," said Robinson, a sly smile on his face. "A couple whis-pers ... it kills the other team's confidence

Robinson joked that he told Stoudamire he'd have to score 100 to beat the Huskies Asked if he really said that, Robinson replied,

"No because he would have gone for 50 The Huskies (27-5) closed the game with a 19-4 run to earn the conference's automatic bid to the NCAA tournament, although Arizo pared the game to a prize fight. "One punch after another," he said. "Arizona brings out the best in us because for so long they have been the best.' The Huskies won three tournament games by a combined 17 points; Arizona won its first two by a total of 56 points.

"No question the team that played the hardest won the ballgame," Arizona coach Lute Olson said. "They're one of the few teams that can send five people to the offensive boards and are quick enough to recover defensively." Robinson and Tre Simmons led the Huskies with 18 points each and Jamaal Williams added 16

Stoudamire, who finished two off the tournament scoring record set by UCLA's Reggie Miller, hit seven three-pointers and the teams combined for 17 three-pointers — both tournament records. He was selected tourney MVP

But he couldn't help the Wildcats to a record fifth tourney title. They are 4-1 in championship games.

"I wanted to be the guy that everyone looks up to, but at the same time, we got to stay within the team concept,' otoudamire said. "We got away from that." The Hueld

Frye finished with 14 points.

With Frye and Stoudamire tightly guarded. Hassan Adams missed a jumper from the top of the key.

The 5-foot-9 Robinson fearlessly drove inside and scored to put the Huskies ahead 75-72 with 1:07 left.

"Nate always comes up big when the game is on the line." Olson said. Stoudamire tripped and fell in front of Arizo-

Asked if he was tripped, Stoudamire said, "I think so, but obviously the ref didn't. You can't let referees decide the game. We believed Stoudamire was tripped.

Then Stoudamire fouled Robinson, who made both free throws, for a 77-72 lead with 34 seconds left. Simmons made two free throws and Stoudamire's jumper bounced off the rim with 26 seconds to go

Syracuse ends W.Virginia's Big East run

By JIM O'CONNELL

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — There was no wild celebrating. The nets are still on the rims at Madison Square Garden

No. 16 Syracuse won its first Big East tournament championship since 1992 on Saturday night with a 68-59 victory over West Virginia. Yet the postgame celebration wasn't far off that for a quality regular-season win.

"This was a great tournament win for us, especially for our se niors; to be able to win this thing was a tremendous accomplishment," Syracuse coach Jim Boeheim said. "I'm real happy for Then why no celebration?

"I don't know," he said "Maybe it's unfortunate but my mind-set has probably changed — and maybe it shouldn't, but it has. In my mind-set, the only thing that matters is next week."

Hakim Warrick had 20 points and 13 rebounds for the Orange, who should be seeded from third to fifth in the NCAA tournament that starts next week. Warrick. the conference player of the year, was selected the tournament

The last time Warrick and his teammates cut down the nets was in New Orleans after the 2003 NCAA championship game.

"That's something you want to save for the Final Four, a national championship," he said. "This is a really big thing, a big win, but we definitely want to be cutting down the nets in St. Louis.

The Big East tournament title was something Warrick wanted once he decided to return for his senior season.

'When I came back I thought of this," he said. "Big East player of the year, Big East tournament champion and MVP. I couldn't end my career any better, couldn't have scripted it any better.

third-seeded Orange (27-6) won their fourth Big East tournament title in their 12th championship game appearance.

The loss ended a history-makthe first No. 8 seed to reach the championship game. No team had ever won four games to take the title and the Mountaineers fell one game short of winning their first conference championship since winning the Atlantic 10 in West Virginia had never gotten past the quarterfinal round before this season. The Mountaineers got past the quarterfinals this time by beating top-seeded Boston College.

"I've been fortunate enough to have similar times in my life but not four times on this stage," West Virginia coach John Beilein said. "But these kids are going to remember this forever.'

Syracuse again used its 2-3 zone defense and Warrick's inside presence to take a big lead. The Orange dominated sec-ond-seeded Connecticut in the semifinals that way but just like that game they also let a big lead

"Our defense both nights was outstanding." Boeheim said. "I just thought defensively we were really good and offensively we did the things we had to."

Syracuse led Connecticut by 21 points with 12:47 to play and wound up winning 67-63. The Orange opened the second half Saturday night with a 10-2 run to take a 51-33 lead over the Mountaineers with 16:12 left.

But West Virginia finally startea niting three-pointers — the Mountaineers were 35-for-74 the first three games — and the lead was down 55-50 with 8:20 left.

Josh Pace tipped in a miss by Warrick with 4:57 left to make it 59-50 - the first Syracuse points not scored by Warrick in 12 minutes — and West Virginia didn't get closer than eight points the rest of the way.

Gerry McNamara added 16 points and Pace had 13 for the Orange, whose other titles came in 1981 and 1988.

Tyrone Sally had 13 points for the Mountaineers, Mike Gansey who made two free throws with 0.2 seconds left to beat Villanova in the semifinals, and Joe Herber each added 11 points.

Aggies end Pacific's 22-game win streak

BY ANDREW DALTON The Associated Press

ANAHEIM, Calif. — Utah State left nothing to chance this year. Left out of the NCAA tournament last season, the Aggies earned the Big West's automatic bid Saturday night with a 65-52 victory over No. 18 Pacific in the championship game of the conference tournament.
Utah State (24-7) ended Pacific's 22-game winning streak to se-cure its fifth NCAA tournament berth - and its fifth Big West championship — in eight years.

"All I know is we're in," Aggies coach Stew Morrill said. "That's all that matters right now."

Big West freshman of the year Jaycee Carroll led Utah State with 22 points, shooting 9-for-19 from the field, and Spencer Nelson added 16 points.

Top-seeded Pacific (26-3) entered with the nation's longest winning streak and had won 34 straight against Big West teams.

Tigers' lowest-scoring game of the season featured 101/2-minute spell without a field goal in the second half.

Utah State went on a 19-2 run midway through the second half, canned by Carroll's short jumper that put the Aggies up 49-37 with 7:32 to play

"Coach always says the advantage goes to the aggressor," Carroll said. "I came out tonight and tried to get them back on their heels

"We had no answer for Carroll," Pacific coach Bob Thomason said. "They deserved to win. The Tigers' leading scorer, Guillaume Yango, scored just six points and Big West player of the year David Doubley was held to The Aggies, who led by as many as 16 in the final minutes, lost twice to Pacific during the regular season, once in overtime and the other time by one point after blowing a six-point lead in the final 30 seconds. "We wanted a chance to play them again and we got our wish,' Nelson said. "We took care of business 1

Pacific led 29-28 at halftime and scored the first four points of the second half. Carroll made a three-pointer to pull Utah State to 35-33, and the Aggies took the lead at 36-35 with a short jumper with 15:38 to go.

The Tigers had a scoreless stretch in the first half nearly as long as their second-half drought. After Jasko Korajkic made a three-pointer to start the game, the Tigers went more than 9 minutes without a basket.

The Tigers were expected to get an at-large tournament bid even with a loss Saturday.

"We deserve to go," Thomason said. "No team in the country is 13-1 on the road. Why wouldn't they want us in there?"

McGwire linked to '90s probe

Report: He was not target of federal steroid investigation

NEW YORK - Mark McGwire's name was mentioned several times during a federal steroids investigation in the early 1990s but he was not the target of the probe nor was any evidence collected against him, the Daily News reported Sunday

McGwire. Jose Canseco and five current players along with four baseball executives were subpoenaed to testify at a congressional hearing on steroids Thursday. The commissioner's office has said it will fight the subpoenas. Canseco says he will testify and has asked for immunity so he can answer all questions; McGwire and some of the other players haven't said whether they'll show in Washington.

Two dealers caught in the federal investiman named Curtis Wenzlaff gave Canseco and McGwire illegal anabolic steroids.

A spokesman for McGwire, Marc Altieri, told the newspaper the former player does not remember meeting Wenzlaff. "We're not going to comment on anything at this time," Altieri said, "but we be-lieve one should consider the sources of such allegations. Canseco said Sunday on ABC's "This Week" he met Wenzlaff in the 1980s and worked out with him but did not buy steroids from him When asked by the newspaper, Wenzlaff declined to comment about McGwire but said he did give Canseco steroids. "I supplied a bunch of players, but I'm zlaff told the Daily News. "Jose's different because he opened the door with his book." Canseco said in his recently published autobiography that he, McGwire and Giambi shot steroids together in a bathroom stall at Oakland Coliseum. McGwire and Giambi have denied Canseco's charges.

Canseco said Sunday he thinks a congressional investigation of steroid use in baseball is a good idea and more people should be called to testify.

"If Major League Baseball wanted in the past to completely just sever steroids from Major League Baseball, they would have done it. Obviously, there was so much money to be made," Canseco told "This Evidence wasn't collected against Mark McGwire during a federal probe, but his name reportedly was mentioned repeatedly.
